BRING THE LOOK HOME FROM ...

KENNEBUNKPORT

Each one of The Cottages at Cabot Cove embodies a happy, fresh style that brings the seafaring spirit of Maine indoors

THE SMALL, SWEET SEASIDE TOWN of Kennebunkport has been upholding Maine's "Vacationland" moniker for centuries with hidden inlets and sprawling beaches, prepped-out guests in boat shoes, and lobster served every way imaginable. And while there are scores of beautiful places to stay along the coast, the 16 cottages that make up The Cottages at Cabot Cove, each with a distinctive look, provide a more unique alternative to hotel living.

One cottage, for example, dubbed "Float In," was designed to simulate the dreamy feeling of being at sea. With a wall of windows overlooking meandering kayakers launching from the dock in the quiet cove, Float In packs a nautical punch into 367 square feet. An exclusively blue-and-white color scheme, stripes upon stripes, and plenty of seaworthy details (rope coasters, brass accents) are set against whitewashed tongue-and-groove paneling.

There's no restaurant at The Cottages, but breakfast arrives via tote bag, which may contain a piping-hot baguette, fresh fruit, a wedge of Brie, butter and jam, juice, and suggestions for how to enjoy the day—including, of course, a leisurely afternoon spent settled into Adirondacks on a front lawn made private by weeping willows and hydrangeas. Then you're a short walk into town for dinner: The new David's KPT restaurant, from celebrated Portland chef David Turin, serves a killer lobster roll. The Maine delicacy is piled high with butter or mayo on a toasty homemade focaccia roll.
